of all avian groups birds of prey in particular have long been a prominent subject of fascination in many human societies this book demonstrates that the art and materiality of human engagements with raptors has been significant through deep time and across the world from earliest prehistory to indigenous thinking in the present day drawing on a wide range of global case studies and a plurality of complementary perspectives it explores the varied and fluid dynamics between humans and birds of prey as evidenced in this diverse art historical and archaeological record from their depictions as powerful beings in visual art and their important roles in indigenous mythologies to the significance of their body parts as active agents in religious rituals the intentional deposition of their faunal remains and the display of their preserved bodies in museums there is no doubt that birds of prey have been figures of great import for the shaping of human society and culture however several of the chapters in this volume are particularly concerned with looking beyond the culture nature dichotomy and human centred accounts to explore perspectival and other post humanist thinking on human raptor ontologies and epistemologies the contributors recognize that human raptor relationships are not driven exclusively by human intentionality and that when these species meet they relate to and become with one another this raptor with human focused approach allows for a productive re framing of questions about human raptor interstices enables fresh thinking about established evidence and offers signposts for present and future intra actions with birds of prey this book presents research into the urban archaeology of 19th century australia it focuses on the detailed archaeology of 20 cesspits in the rocks area of sydney and the commonwealth block site in melbourne it also includes discussions of a significant site in sydney first government house the book is anchored around a detailed comparison of contents of 20 cesspits created during the 19th century and examines patterns of similarity and dissimilarity presenting analyses that work towards an integration of historical and archaeological data and perspectives the book also outlines a transnational framework of comparison that assists in the larger context related to building a truly global archaeology of the modern city this framework is directly related a multi scalar approach to urban archaeology historical archaeologists have been advocating the need to explore the archaeology of the modern city using several different scales or frames of reference the most popular and most basic of these has been the household however it has also been acknowledged that interpreting the archaeology of households beyond the notion that every household and associated archaeological assemblage is unique requires archaeologists and historians to compare and contrast and to establish patterns these comparisons frequently occur at the level of the area or district in the same city where archaeologists seek to derive patterns that might be explained as being the result of status class ethnicity or ideology other less frequent comparisons occur at larger scales for example between cities or countries acknowledging that the archaeology of the modern western city is also the archaeology of modern global forces of production consumption trade immigration and ideology formation this book makes a contribution to that general literature the great war of 1914 1918 now stands at the furthest edge of living memory and yet hardly a month passes without some dramatic and sometimes tragic discovery being made along the old killing fields of the western front graves of british soldiers buried during battle still lying in rows seemingly arm in arm or found crouching at the entrance to a dugout whole underground cities of trenches dugouts and shelters have been preserved in the mud field hospitals carved out of the chalk country of the somme marked with graffiti unexploded bombs and gas canisters all of these are the poignant and sometimes deadly legacies of a war we can never forget killing time digs beneath the surface of war to uncover the living reality left behind nicholas j saunders brings together a wealth of discoveries to offer fresh insights into the human and often barbaric aspect of warfare he uses discoveries in the trenches family photographs diaries and souvenirs to give the dead a voice you cannot fail to be fascinated and moved by what he unearths
